Several pieces of ELEGANT HISTORICAL, &c. TAPESTRY, from designs of Le Brun, one of the first painters that ever lived in Europe, intended to ornament a Museum, a Columbia Gallery of Arts, or a School of Drawing and Painting in Alexandria, for the instruction of young and ingenious artists and mechanics, and to gratify the curiosity of all persons of taste, residents or travellers, in the United States, where such curious and beautiful pieces are very rare.

A Museum is not only an ornament to a city, but it is a continual and abundant source of information for the citizens at large.

Besides, such an enterprize is very lucrative and advantageous to the owner ; gifts from some well spirited men, travellers and navigators, who present that useful establishment with admirable productions of nature and art.

A very considerable revenue yearly iffuses from it : In Boston, New York and Philadelphia, it is not less than two thousand dollars yearly receipt. Even in the small city of Hartford, (Conn.) a Museum is sufficient to support the family of a gentleman formerly a minister. As Alexandria is fast increasing in commerce and population, the institution of a Museum will add to the importance and splendor of the town, and would be of great advantage to the owner.

PARIS, January 31.
REPORT OF COL. SEBASTIANI.
(Concluded.)

I went to the house of the commissary, of the Republic of the Seven Isles. A short time after, the Pacha's drogoman came to conduct me to Ghezar, who received me in an apartment, in which he was alone, and which had no furniture but a carpet. He had on one side of him a pistol with four barrels, an air gun, a sabre, and an axe. After inquiring concerning my health; he asked me if I was well convinced, that, when the hour of our end had been proclaimed in Heaven, nothing could alter our destiny. My answer was, that I believed, as he did, in fatalism. He talked a long time in this strain, and I perceived, that he affected an extreme simplicity, that he wished to pass for a man of understanding, and what is more, for a just one. He several times repeated to me, "Ghezar is said to be barbarous, he is but just and severe. Intreat the First Consul, added he, not to send me a lame or one-eyed man as commissary of commercial relations; because, it would certainly be said that Ghezar had reduced him to that condition." A moment after, he observed to me again, "I wish that the commissary, you will send, should reside at Leide; though this port has more commerce than any in my states, an agent will not be necessary here; I shall be myself the French commissary, and your countrymen shall have the most friendly reception. esteem the French highly. Bonaparte is small in person, but he is the greatest of men; I also know that they regret him at Cairo, and that they would wish to have him there again!"

"I said a few words to him on the peace between France and the Porte; to which he answered, "Do you know why I receive, and feel pleasure in seeing you? it is, because you come without a master; I regard not the orders of the Divan, and I entertain most profound contempt for the one eyed Vizier. It is said, Ghezar is a Bosnian, a worthless, a cruel man, and I am sought after. I was born poor; that does not make me proud, for all things have an end, and this day or tomorrow, Ghezar, himself, may perhaps come to his end, not that he is old, as his enemies say, (and to this, he began to wield his arms after the manner of the Mamelukes, with much agility,) but, because God shall have so ordained it. The King of France, though he was powerful, has perished.—Nebuchadnezzar, the great king of his time, was slain by a gnat, &c. He repeated other sentences to the same effect, and talked to me afterwards of the motives that had determined him to make war on the French army. In the whole of his conversation it was easy to observe, that he wished to be reconciled with the First Consul, and that he feared his resentment.

"The following is the apologue which he made use of to demonstrate the reasons that induced him to resistance:—"A black slave, after a tedious journey in which he had suffered every species of privation, arrived in a small field of sugar canes; he stood there, refreshed himself with this delicious liquor, and revolved to settle himself in the field. Soon after passed two travellers, the first of whom saluted him civilly. The Devil take you, answered the black slave. The second traveler approached, and asked him why he had given such an uncivil answer to so kind an address? I had, replied he, good reasons for that; had my answer been courteous, that man would have entered into conversation with me, he would have seated himself by me; he would have partaken of my support, have found it good, and would endeavored to obtain the exclusive possession of it."

"On my recommendation he promised protection to the Christians, and particularly the Convents of Nazareth and Jerusalem; and he several times assured me his sword was more to be depended on than treaties.

"His palace is built with much taste and elegance, but, to reach the apartments, one must pass through an infinite number of windings. At the foot of the stair case is the prison, the door of which is always open from noon till night. In passing I observed a number of unfortunate crowded there. There are in the court twelve field pieces, with their ammmunition chests, in very good order. Never have I seen a more frightful and revolting spectacle than Ghezar's Minister, whom I met on coming out. The Pacha had caused one of his eyes to be put out, and his ears and nose to be cut off. I saw more than a hundred in the city in the same condition. In viewing the domestics of Ghezar, and even the inhabitants of Acre, one would suppose oneself in a nest of robbers, ready for assassination: this monster has stamped the seal of his atrocious character on every thing that surrounds him.

"I have seen at Acre the procurator of the Propaganda and of the Holy Land. The latter is penetrated with gratitude to the First Consul for his protection of the Monks. He says, that Ghezar does every thing to be reconciled with the First Consul; and the fact is, that a French vessel, which had been at Acre, before my arrival, had been well treated by the Pacha."

After a description of the state of Ghezar's territories, and of the adjoining provinces, Sebastiani proceed in his account: "On November 20, I left Acre, and being prevented by contrary winds from going to Jaffa, made sail for Zante. Tho' put under quarantine, I procured permission to go to the Governor and French Commissary, under an escort of officers of health." Here he lectured the authorities, assuring them of the lively interest the Chief Consul took for their welfare, and advising them, in his name, to lay aside all party spirit. Every thing bowed to the name of Bonaparte. The air resounded with cries of "Long live Bonaparte." Even the fear of citizen Sebastiani's displeasure caused the release of two men who had been arrested for a riot on the occasion: and the affrighted Governor, when summoned before him, promised, that he would consider those, who had cried "Long live the First Consul," as good citizens, and treat them as such. At the conclusion of his account of the Republic of the Seven Islands, he asserts, that the Islands of the Ionian Sea will declare themselves French at any time it shall be thought proper.

He next subjoins an account of the state and force of the British garrison at Alexandria, with the number of each re-uninteresting account of the fortress of Egypt, which he represents as in general in a state of decay. The whole force of the Turks in Egypt, he represents as not exceeding 16140 men, and in a very bad state. After enumerating the disposition of this force in the several posts in Egypt, he adds that it is unnecessary to observe that this cannot be considered an army; the men are badly armed, without discipline, without confidence in their officers, and enervated by excess and debauchery. The officers resemble their soldiers in every thing; ignorant of the first principles of the military art, and influenced solely by attractions of riches, they have no thought but to get wealth, and to find means of retiring with security. Six thousand French would at this moment be sufficient for the conquest of Egypt.

The army of the Mamelukes, under the Beys, consists of 3000 Mamelukes, 3500 Arabs of the tribe of Abadda de Chark, and 3500 of the tribes of Binially. The command is divided between Ibrahim Bey, the Chief, and Osman Bey, successor to Murad Bey. They have twenty French deserters, who form a corps of artillery. They have uniformly beaten the Turks in every engagement, and the Egyptians prefer them to the followers of Osman. All Upper Egypt is in subjection to them.

Syria he states to be in tolerable condition for defence. The fortifications of Acre have been repaired, some works have been added, and the whole are kept in a reasonable condition. The weakest part lies towards the sea, and particularly the point that defends the entrance into the port. The forces of Ghezar amount to 13000 or 14000 men.

The Emir of the Druses has refused his contribution to Ghezar, and has raised a formidable army. The English thought to interfere as mediators between the Emir and Ghezar, but the latter rejected their mediation.

The Porte has at this moment little connection with Syria.

(Signed)

"HORACE SEBASTIANI."

NEW YORK, April 4.

The arrival of the ships Two Friends and Oneida Chief from London, and the ship Henry, from Cork, all in 28 days passage, has furnished us with irregular files of English and Irish papers to the first of March, 14 days later than had been previously received. Our London Prices Current are to the 26th Feb.

Several petitions, praying for a repeal of the duties on the importation of cotton and wool, were preparing in different parts of G. Britain.

The sale of purified and common salt, by wholesale and retail is prohibited throughout the Italian Republic, and permitted only to persons authorized by Government.

Orders have been issued from the War Office in London to increase the bounties for recruiting, and to take men two inches below the usual standard.

The free navigation of the Black Sea has been granted to the Spanish, Neapolitan, and Batavian trade, at the intercession of the Emperor Alexander, in order to increase the Russian commerce in that sea. In return for this privilege, the Ottoman vessels are to enjoy in the ports of these powers the rights of the most favored nations. Britain and France are, however, to possess exclusive privileges; and, in particular, that of establishing Consuls in the Turkish ports of the Euxine.

The law respecting the transit of certain foreign manufactures through Holland, and the prohibition of others, is likely to be repealed, or at least to be suspended till the Batavian Government shall have received a satisfactory elucidation on the subject.

A Court of Enquiry has been lately ordered to be held for the purpose of investigating the conduct of several Recruiting Officers, who are suspected of peculation in Ireland.

The Emperor of Germany has issued a decree declaring Venice a free port.

The recommendation to mercy of the jury who convicted Colonel Despard, the mediation of Lord Nelson, and the prisoner's own written application, have been without effect: His execution was judged necessary from motives of State Policy; and, accordingly, the sentence of the 11th of his associates on the 21st Feb. They met their fate with fortitude. Colonel Despard having asked and obtained permission, addressed the spectators in the following manner:—"Fellow citizens, I come here, as you see, after having served my country faithfully, honorably and usefully, served it for thirty years and upwards, to suffer death upon a scaffold for a crime of which I protest I am not guilty. I solemnly declare that I am no more guilty of it than any of you who may be now hearing me. But though his Majesty's minister's know as well as I do that I am not guilty, yet they avail themselves of a legal pretext to destroy a man because he has been a friend to truth, to liberty and to justice—because he has been a friend to the poor and the oppressed.—But, citizens, I hope and trust, notwithstanding my fate, and the fate of those who no doubt will soon follow me, that the principles of freedom, of humanity, and of justice, will finally triumph over falsehood, tyranny, and delusion, and every principle hostile to the interests of the human race. And now having said this, I have little more to add, except to wish you all health, happiness & freedom, which I have endeavored, as far as was in my power to procure for you, and for mankind in general."

The same day on which Colonel Despard was executed, Mr. Peltier, the Editor of a paper printed in London called L'Ambigu, was tried at the instance of the British Government, and convicted of publishing a libel on Bonaparte.

Alexandria Advertiser.

FRIDAY, APRIL 8.

The President of the United States arrived at Washington on Sunday last from Monticello.

The ship Brutus, Bunce, for this port, sailed from the Downs on the 4th March, in company with the Two Friends arrived at New York.

Married yesterday, by the Rev. Mr. Muir, Mr. Guy Atkinson, of this town, to Miss Birch, daughter of Mr. William Birch of Spring Lands, near Philadelphia.

Mr. Snowden.—To shew the candour and sincerity of Mr. Jefferson, I send you a short extract from the speech that he delivered before the Senate, when John Adams was first sworn in as President of the U. States. He says in these words:

"No one more sincerely prays that no accident may call me to the higher and more important functions which the constitution eventually devolves on this office. These have been confided to the eminent character, (John Adams) who has preceded me here, whose talents and integrity have been known and revered by me through a long course of years, have been the foundation of a cordial and uninterrupted friendship between us, and I devoutly pray he may be long preferred for the government, the happiness and prosperity of our common country."—O! tempora, O! mores.

A Fairfax Farmer.

Mr. Snowden.—To trace the subscriber thro' his wilderness of federalism, in a newspaper contest, would inconsistent with my occupation and disposition. If his standing in society entitles him to any respect, he will please to call at my shop in Royal, between King and Prince Streets: and if the measure I have taken for him does not exactly fit, I will make the necessary alterations—for without I know where he lives, I cannot tell whether he is a Tory, Federalist or Royalist.

JOHN LONGDEN.

Communication.

Hollo, you that have got votes in Fairfax, aint you goin to turn out at election, and lend a hand to give Jo Lewis a put aboard the Congress?

He did his duty in the Capitol last vey. age like a good seaman.

He can box the compass, hand, reef and sheet, as well as most lads of his experience.

Jo is friendly to the district of Columbus. I've known him since he was at higher than a marline spike. He served his time here in the merchant service, in as staunch a ship as any belonging to the port, and with as honest a Captain as ever was wet with salt water.

I understand its the fashion, now adays, to tell lies at lections. Don't do so my cockies, its unbecoming a good sailor.— You can say nothing against Dick Frent. He's a sailor and a gentleman. If you differ a bit in polityicks, why it can't be help you know. It will happen with the best of sailors in polityicks as well as religion.

Jo always liked honest Commodore Washington, the seaman's friend, though he never had the honor of serving with him.

He has a high respect for Capt. Adams, if twas only for his past services.

He gave honest answers to the questions of an old farmer, by which you can judge of his principles. He don't think it right, d'yee see, to give Mounser Nic Frog two millions of dollars, just to put him in mind to ask for six more, and he's too much of a sailor to be in favor of new fashund dry docks. Even with the proposed improvements, he don't think them worth a rope yarn, or a second hand chaw of tobacco.

Now don't be lubberly and lay too long in your hammocks, turn out, my heartys, in season. After taking a quid, and rigging my horse, I shall take a sea biscuit and a bit of salt junk in my pocket, and Dick Ratcliff will lend me a drop of grog to relish it with at the end of my voyage.

Your humble servant at command,
JACK HATCHWAY.

[As friends to humanity and science, we are happy in presenting our readers with the Letter from the celebrated Dr. Rush, to Dr. Waterhouse, relative to that most important discovery—the KINE POCK INOCULATION.—It is extracted from Dr. W's interesting Treatise on that subject, advertised for sale in our paper of this day.]

Philadelphia, Feb. 9, 1801.

DEAR SIR,

Accept my thanks for your friendly and instructing letter. Our whole city will, I hope, be benefited by it, as well as myself; for I have put the most important facts into the hands of a printer, and they will appear in a day or two in one of our daily papers.

In answer to your letter, I shall send you a copy of part of a lecture I delivered to my class a few weeks ago, upon the new mode of inoculation from vaccine matter; from which you will perceive that I have adopted the discovery with as much zeal and confidence, as you have done, and that I look forward to the complete extinction of the small pox by it.

There was a time, when the very name of the small pox inspired more terror than war, famine, earthquakes, and pestilence; and with reason, for more of the human race have been destroyed by it, than by any one of them, or perhaps by all of them, in a given time, put together. War has its intervals of peace; famine is often preceded and followed by years of plenty; earthquakes are extremely limited in their destructive effects upon human life; and even the plague itself is a less evil than the small pox.

The truth of this last assertion will appear, when we consider the plague is confined to filthy cities, and marshy countries; where, as the small pox prevails in all situations, Cleanliness and the cultivation of the earth are no securities against it. The plague prevails only in certain years and seasons, and requires the concurrence of a malignant constitution of the atmosphere; whereas the small pox prevails in all seasons and states of the air.—The plague now and then ceases, like war, from the face of the earth; but the small pox has never ceased for a single year, to spread death over some parts of our globe, since it made its first appearance in the year 572. It has been computed, that forty millions of people have died of it in different parts of the world, in the course of the last century, during part of which time its mortality was much lessened compared with former centuries, by means of inoculation.

Allowing for its being confined for many centuries, in its ravages upon human life, to its birth place in Africa, it is still probable, several hundred millions of people have perished by it, since its first introduction into the world. In contemplating this immense destruction of our species by a single disease, together with the ravages it has occasionally committed upon the senses, upon beauty, and upon health in persons who have survived it, we are struck with horror at the retrospect, and are led to mourn over the wide extended scene which it exhibits of human misery. But happily for mankind, this general mortality and misery will be felt and seen no more. A new era is begun in the medical history of man, and the most mortal of all diseases is about to be struck out of the list of human evils.

Its destiny is fixed, and the day is not very remote, when the very name of the small pox shall be found only in books of medicine. I need hardly add, that this great revolution in favor of the population and happiness of our species, has been effected by the substitution of a harmless disease, taken from a domestic animal, to the small pox. Thick and lasting be the honors of that highly favored physician, who first discovered and established this safe and delicate antidote to a mortal and loathsome disease. Unknown till lately, beyond the limits of the district in which he practised, the name of Dr. Jenner has extended to every part of the globe, and will be coeval with time itself. His extensive and durable fame will be merited, for he has introduced into the world, the means of saving millions of lives.

"For a full account of the advantages of vaccine inoculation, above inoculation for the small pox, I refer you to Dr. Aikin's epitome of nearly all that has been published upon this subject. I shall briefly enumerate them.

1. It requires no preparation in diet and medicine.
2. It may be performed with equal safety at all seasons.
3. It is a mild disease, seldom confining a patient to his house, or interrupting his business.
4. It risks no sense, and does no injury to beauty.
5. It is not contagious.
6. It sometimes carries off chronic diseases.
7. It is never mortal, except when it is accidentally combined with other diseases.

"Let us not be discouraged by the few instances which have occurred of the vaccine matter having failed to produce the disease. Time and experience will soon correct our errors, and perfect our knowledge in this branch of medicine. I well recollect the time when inoculation for the small pox was attended with much less certainty and success than it is at present; and when the deaths and sore arms from it, had nearly banished it from our country. So unpopular was it, from these and other less reasonable causes, that Dr. Boylston had the windows of his house broken for attempting to introduce it into the then province of Massachusetts.

"There was a time, when the very name of the small pox inspired more terror than war, famine, earthquakes, and pestilence; and with reason, for more of the human race have been destroyed by it, than by any one of them, or perhaps by all of them, in a given time, put together. War has its intervals of peace; famine is often preceded and followed by years of plenty; earthquakes are extremely limited in their destructive effects upon human life; and even the plague itself is a less evil than the small pox.

The truth of this last assertion will appear, when we consider the plague is confined to filthy cities, and marshy countries; where, as the small pox prevails in all situations, Cleanliness and the cultivation of the earth are no securities against it. The plague prevails only in certain years and seasons, and requires the concurrence of a malignant constitution of the atmosphere;

whereas the small pox prevails in all seasons and states of the air.—The plague now and then ceases, like war, from the face of the earth; but the small pox has never ceased for a single year, to spread death over some parts of our globe, since it made its first appearance in the year 572.

It has been computed, that forty millions of people have died of it in different parts of the world, in the course of the last century, during part of which time its mortality was much lessened compared with former centuries, by means of inoculation.

Allowing for its being confined for many centuries, in its ravages

Capt. Calvert of the Maria, in 35 days from Gibraltar, brings dispatches from Consul Gaynor. While at the Rock, it was reported that Lieut. Sterret, of the Enterprise, had taken a prize having Tripolitan property on board. It was not officially known at Gibraltar, that Algiers had declared war against France. A rumour to that effect prevailed previous to capt. C's sailing. No accounts were received of the loss of an American Frigate. The Adams was at Gibraltar, and the John Adams was on her way to Malta.

LAND,

late the property of John Fitzgerald, deceased, sold pursuant to the directions of his will for the payment of his debts, to wit:

One parcel of Land lying up on the east side of Union Street & to the northward of Wilkes street, fronting twenty eight feet upon Union street and extending about two hundred feet into the river, having an alley of twenty feet running the whole depth; upon it is erected a frame warehouse; the ground is subject to an annual rent of 91. 17s. od. It will be sold altogether or divided to accommodate purchasers. One half of a brewery, with all the implements and utensils necessary for carrying on the business upon a large scale, and a parcel of ground appertaining to it, fronting about forty feet upon Water street. The whole of the brewery and ground is now under a demise, at a rent of six hundred dollars per annum. A piece of ground immediately joining on the brewery, and fronting about forty feet on Water street, and extending one hundred and fifty feet on a twenty feet alley. A piece of ground fronting on Wolfe and St. Asaph's streets. This will be laid off in convenient lots. A piece of ground lying up on the south side of King street, exceeding 82 feet to a twelve feet alley; in the front is erected a two story brick dwelling house, and upon the alley a two story frame warehouse. A piece of ground lying upon Union and Wolfe streets, extending with Wolfe sixty two feet and an half with Union about 120 feet. Upon this there are erected a large distillery, warehouse and comp-ting room. The improvements were calculated for carrying on that business upon an extensive scale; there are three stills in it. Not having been occupied for sometime past, the property is something out of repair. The ground is subject to an annual rent of 131. 18s. od. There will be sold at the same time, a small tract of land contiguous to the town, containing 37 acres. This is subdivided, and will be sold in small parcels continuing from 4 to 6 acres. The sale will be continued till the whole is sold.

The terms of sale are one fourth of the purchase money in hand when deeds will be executed to the purchasers; one other fourth in six months after the sale; one other fourth in twelve months, and the remaining fourth in eighteen months, for securing these payments deed of trust will be required upon the property conveyed from each purchaser for his part.

is now at Mr. Gadsby's, beginning to fulfill his appointments, and will receive fresh applications for a few days to come.

Those who are injured in their speech, as well as their appearance, by the loss of their teeth, may have transplanting done in a permanent manner, or artificial teeth set after the most perfect model of nature.

Those who wish to have their teeth restored to their natural elegance, with instruments that cannot injure the enamel, and without pain, have now an opportunity.

He gives immediate and effectual relief in all cases of scurvy; prevents hollow teeth from further decay, and extracts such as are too far gone to save, with a degree of ease to the patient of which no other instruments are capable.

Parents who wish their children to grow up with sound and regular teeth, may have them on his subscription list (where the terms are stated) at Two Dollars per year, and regularly attended.

From the increasing demand for his DENTIFRICE, he has brought with him a larger supply than usual, and will make a proper allowance to those who buy to sell again.

Feb. 2.

A great bargain in Land,

Will be sold at the Coffee House in Alexandria, on Wednesday the 1st of January, next,

A valuable tract of Land lying on the waters of the Occoquan River, about three miles from Mt. Ellicott's Mills; containing five hundred and twenty six acres, as by Deed of a General Warrantee bearing date of the 11th Febrary, 1802, from the late Charles Tuner to the subscribers. This Land is well adapted to can, wheat and tobacco, and is well thunbered of the growth of oak, hickory, and poplar; and the improvements are a comfortable dwelling house, kitchen, smoke house, stables &c. &c. with several fine springs of water, together with a fine flourishing young orchard of peach and apple trees, and the situation considered remarkably healthy.

Any person wishing to view the land, may do it by applying to Edward Washington Elkire, who now has it in possession, until Christmas next, when it will be delivered up to the purchaser.

The advantage of cutting Cord Wood from this land is very great, there being a great abundance and navigation near at hand.

The terms of sale will be for approved paper,

Payment at two, four and six months.
